2019 Advent & Christmas Schedule Mail Issue

The Advent & Christmas Schedule mailing was printed and delivered to the U.S. Post Office in mid-November, giving plenty of time to be delivered to homes so it could be usable. We are aware that some of you are just receiving it now. The problem lies with the U.S. Postal Service not with the Parish. We are working on the Holy Week & Easter mailing and are hoping that the same thing does not occur—we are in contact with the Post Office to eliminate any future issues of this kind. Thank you to all who have notified us of the problem.

A short series of thoughts on the impact of this historic, critically defining event of our Church not just for the 20th century, but for this new millennium as well Part 3

by Barbara A. Glynn, former Director of Religious Education at St. Catherine of Siena

As could have been predicted, there were not many concrete results from the first session of the Council in the Fall of 1962, but work was begun on what would be the most dominant concern and the greatest achievement of this Council: the Dogmatic Constitution on the Church. However, when we consider the sheer number of important documents discussed over the remaining three sessions of the Council, we can understand the immense amount of discussion, prayer, study—and yes, even arguments—that went into the whole time the Council was in session. For more than 2000 Church leaders to come to almost unanimous agreement on such a vast array of topics is near tangible proof of the presence of the Holy Spirit.

On June 3, 1963, Pope John died of stomach cancer, and the Council went forward under his successor, Pope Paul VI. There were many reasons why the Council lasted as long as it did, each Fall for 10 weeks, 1962-65. The main reason was the Council's substantive reworking of the material it originally received from the early study commissions, and even a rejection of important parts of that material. So, drama marked every session as highly charged debate occurred between conservative and progressive bishops on almost all issues under consideration.

By the time the Council concluded, Paul VI had promulgated in his name and in the name of the Council—"Paul, Bishop, together with the Council"—16 documents. They cover an extraordinary wide range of subjects and do so at considerable length. These documents are the Council's most authoritative and accessible legacy and it is around them that any study of the Council must turn. What then, are these 16 documents? Although they are often lumped together without distinction of rank, they are not equal in dignity or in the authority attributed to them. The highest in rank are the "constitutions" of which there are only 4: the document on the Liturgy, the document on the Church, the document on Divine Revelation, and the document on the Church in the Modern World. All other documents are to be interpreted in conformity with the principles and directions enunciated in these 4 constitutions. Next in rank come the nine(9) so called "decrees": on the Communications Media, on the Catholic Eastern Churches, on Ecumenism, on Bishops, on Religious Orders, on the Training of Priests, on Missionary Activity, on the Life and Ministry of Priests, and on the Apostolate of the Laity. Finally, there are the three(3) "declarations": on Christian Education, on non-Christian Religions, and on Religious Liberty.

The scope of issues the Council addressed in these documents is almost breathtaking. Some of these issues are: the use of the organ in church services, the legitimacy or illegitimacy of stockpiling of nuclear weapons, the place of St. Thomas Aquinas in seminary curricula, how priests were to be compensated, the purpose of marriage, translations of the Bible, the role of conscience in moral decision-making, and so on, it might seem, into infinity. All these issues must be taken seriously, but some are certainly of greater significance than others. Generally speaking, the most important issues were the most contested on the floor of the Council and ignited the most spectacular verbal fireworks.

So, what are some of these most important issues? That, my friends, will be our topic for next week. Stay tuned.
